Longtime Automotive Industry Executive John Felder Makes History After Biden Administration Greenlights Deal to Export Electric Vehicles to Cuba.

Washigton D.C. - In a breakthrough agreement, the first of its kind since the embargo imposed by the United States of America on Cuba in the aftermath of the Cuban Missile Crisis, John Felder, CEO of US-based Premier Automotive Export LTD., has made history with an agreement to export USA- manufactured electric vehicles, scooters, and bi-directional charge stations to Cuba.

“This has been a journey, a long time coming, and I’m literally over the moon with excitement and positive expectations about what this deal means for US/Cuba trade relations in a deal set not only to benefit my firm, but USA automakers – and especially the Cuban people,” said Mr. Felder in a recent interview. “Eleven months after Premier Automotive Export’s original request was denied, the Biden-Harris Administration has now made the historic decision to approve a four-year license for us to export electric vehicles and scooters to Cuba in a deal that includes providing infrastructure and support for bi-directional vehicle charging stations! This is a really big deal…”

Initially, Cuba will take delivery of up to 500 USA-manufactured electric vehicles, including Ford, GM, Chrysler and Nissan. The deal also includes delivery of 10,000 electric scooters. Columbia, Maryland-based Premier Automotive Export, Ltd. (PAE) isn’t only licensed by the Bureau of Industry and Security of the United States Department of Commerce to export electric vehicles, but will also add to Cuba’s green energy initiative to reduce their dependence on fossil fuel.

“We’re looking to partner with other automotive and energy producing firms to support this initiative,” said Mr. Felder, a disabled, Vietnam-era US Air Force veteran. “It’s an amazing opportunity for American automobile manufacturers and others to join us, follow our lead, and work with PAE to bring a carbon zero footprint to a nation the size of Florida with a dynamic population and emerging automobile market of 11.5 million people! And, here at home, I especially want to express my gratitude to the Biden-Harris Administration for their invaluable support…”

PAE’s John Felder will travel to Cuba between March 2 – 6, 2023 with members of his management team to welcome the first delivery of electric cars and scooters to the Republic of Cuba.
